The Armstrong Air and Space Museum shares the story of Neil Armstrong and all Ohioans who have defied gravity. It hosts visitors from throughout the world.

The museum's commitment to education touches thousands of school-age children each year and provides lifelong learning opportunities for individuals and families.

The Armstrong Air and Space Museum Association was established in 2009 as a not-for-profit organization to provide local management of the museum. Working together, the Association and Ohio Historical Society are improving public access and services at the museum. The visitor experience has been enhanced and museum operations are being expanded.

This is an exciting new opportunity for the museum and those of us who value its importance to Ohio and the nation. As private citizens we can invest our time and money in the important work to preserve the legacy of America's aerospace accomplishments.

There are a wide variety of opportunities for your involvement — from financial contributor to volunteer. Your participation will help us preserve the museum and share its story with future generations.
